OAHU COLLEGE AND HAWAII LOSE A FRIEND

James F. Hunnewell, son of the founder of C. Brewer & Co., Honolulu, died in Boston on the 11th of last month. He never visited Hawaii, but his relations with these islands were intimate and important. Mr. Hunnewell for nearly forty years had charge of the endowment fund raised in the United States for Oahu College, during which time the fund was increased nearly fifty per cent by his careful management.

Following is part of the obituary sketch of the late Mr. Hunnewell which appeared in the Boston Transcript:

James Frothingham Hunnewell, widely known as a merchant, an author and philanthropist, interested in various uplifting works, died Nov. 11, at the age of seventy-eight years. Mr. Hunnewell had been ill for about six months. He was born in Green street Charlestown, on July 3, 1832, and was the son of James and Susan (Lamson) Hunnewell. Though he resided at 289 Beacon street, Mr. Hunnewell always retained ownership in the place of his birth. The Hunnewell family lived in Charlestown from as far back as 1698, and the Frothinghams, another old family of that district, date from 1630.

Mr. Hunnewell received his education mostly in private schools, and then entered the shipping business under his father, who was engaged in trade with foreign ports chiefly Honolulu. The mercantile house of the firm in Honolulu was established in 1826 by Mr. Hunnewell's father. Mr. Hunnewell retired from active business some years ago and had since devoted his time to research along antiquarian and historical lines, and apart from this was occupied with private and trust affairs.

In his long life of activity, Mr. Hunnewell had served on the old school board of Charlestown Public Library, and in that section was a member of the standing committee of the First Parish, while other Charlestown interests concerned him in his capacity of president of the Charlestown Gas Company, vice-president of the Winchester Home for Aged Women, trustee of the Free Dispensary, trustee of the Five Cents Savings Banks, director of the Bunker Hill Monument Association. He was an officer of the Society for Propagating the Gospel, and he was formerly president of the Hawaiian Club in the Hawaiian Islands.

For several years Mr. Hunnewell was an ex officio director of the New England Historic-Genalogical Society and as far back as the late sixties he became a member of the American Antiquarian Society. He had held membership also in various clubs such as the Union, St. Botolph, Boston Art, Massachusetts Reform and the Bostonian Society, which he has served as president.

An author, Mr. Hunnewell had published several historical works of interest which showed much careful research and study, and in extensive travels he had collected many rare books, records, plates and the like. Some of his more important published works are "The Lands of Scott," "Bibliography of Charlestown, Mass., and Bunker Hill," "The Historical Monuments of France," "The Imperial Island," "England's Chronicle in Stone," "A Century of Town Life," "Civilization at the Hawaiian Islands," "An American Shrine," "Records of the First Church, Charlestown," "Journal of the Voyage of the Missionary Packet Boston to Honolulu."

Mr. Hunnewell was married to Sarah Melville, the daughter of Ezra and Sarah (Parker) Farnsworth of Boston, on April 3, 1872. Mrs. Hunnewell, who survives her husband, is deeply interested in charities and church work. A son, James Melville Hunnewell, also survives.

The funeral of Mr. Hunnewell took place Monday afternoon from St. Paul's Church, with which parish his wife and son had long been closely identified.

THE DEAR OLD HOME.

"Why are you constantly whistling 'Home Sweet Home'?" Is that where your thoughts are?

"Yes," replied Mr. Crosslots. "When I left there this morning the roof leaked, the furnace wouldn't draw and the hired girl had quit. I simply can't get my mind off it."—Washington Star.

James Magrath, black-face comedian who will appear at the Savoy Theater Saturday evening.

LECTURER ON HAWAII IS ACCUSED

BRIDGEPORT, November 1.—The Bridgeport Post this evening publishes the following story:

Having, it is understood, an iron-clad contract with the various churches in which she appears, a contract, which is iron clad only as far as the church is concerned, but which practically places no restrictions whatever on herself, Miss Lottie Tillotson, who has been making a round of the local churches lecturing on Hawaii, has used methods which have brought her into deep disrepute with the people of these churches.

Misrepresentation, it is alleged, is the manner in which she gets her footing, the entering wedge so to speak. Then through means of a contract in legal form in which the party of the first part and the party of the second part have prominent roles but which is not appreciated by a hasty glance at it, which is about all the average person gives such a document, she catches her fish.

These contracts are duly drawn up, signed and sealed. In them the party of the first part agrees to give one of her entertainments. Here is the place where a bit of thinking should be done. One of her entertainments. Nothing mentioned as to what the character or scope of the entertainment shall be. All she has to do, if she chooses, is to step out and recite one piece, or even make a few choice faces at the audience, and say: "that is one of my entertainments." Nothing can be done about it. She is also to be allowed to take the tickets.

Here is another place to stop, look and listen. This is what the party of the second part is to do. Furnish the hall and four or five musical numbers. Then she is to be entertained the day before and the day after her lecture. Rental must be paid for the posters and tickets if she furnishes them. If any are lost they must be replaced. Now listen hard: If either party fails to observe in one particular the terms of this contract, the sum of $100 is to be forfeited. Also Miss Tillotson gets half the receipts.

Coming here she went to Mrs. N. E. Wordin of the First Congregational church and represented to her that she came from Rev. John DePen and that he recommended her. Afterwards she went to Mrs. Faulkner of the King's Highway chapel, and said that two ladies of her congregation had sent her. In both cases it was simply misrepresentation. Dr. DePen had not seen her nor had the two ladies. She secured a contract at the First Congregational church, however. Her record had been looked up in the meantime and she was found to have had a great deal of trouble in New Haven over the manner in which she handled the financial end of her lecture.

Miss Tillotson is the same woman that caused a commotion as a result of the lecture she delivered here for the Howard Avenue Congregational Church on the subject of Hawaii. As a result of her demands the church officers and committees were aroused over the matter and a special meeting was held sustaining the action taken in regard to the lecture.

PERFECT DISGUISE.

ELECTRIC LIGHTS FOR THE CHRISTMAS TREE.

he lighting of the Christmas trees by electricity is one of the dreams that occurs to every person who feels called upon to provide such decoration for his house on the festive day. How to do it without unusual expense forms a problem that is not so easily solved. Two plans for the purpose are given in Popular Mechanics for December, and both involve the use of the ordinary commercial electric light circuit.

In the first, all the small lamps are connected "in series" and in the second they are set up in what the electricians call "parallel." In the first case, the 110 volt pressure of the supply mains is distributed over all of the lamps, each lamp having a certain portion of the total. If it is desired to operate, say, 10-volt lamps, then there must be eleven of the lamps connected in series and all these must be of the same candlepower. If they are not of the same candlepower, and the higher resistance lamps (lower candlepower) might be burned out, due to the excessive current.

In the second case, each lamp is connected directly to the supply mains independently of all the others. Lamps of different candlepower can be used in this case, but they must all be constructed to work on the same voltage. The material required for this outfit is the same as that need for the first one.

WHO KNOWS.

A boy in a Chicago school refused to sew, evidently considering it beneath the dignity of a ten-year-old man. "George Washington sewed," said the principal, taking it for granted that a soldier must; "and do you consider yourself better than George Washington?"

"I don't know, time will tell," said he seriously.
